Dear Hiring Team,

Re: Office Manager

For the past eight years I have run the day-to-day operations of Newcastle City Business Centre, a 45-suite serviced office centre whose tenants include accounting, legal and allied health practices. I joined as Office Administrator in 2018, was appointed Office Manager in 2025, and throughout was the first point of contact for clients and visitors while keeping everything behind the scenes running smoothly for the director. Your Office Manager role covers almost exactly that scope, in a professional-services setting I know well.

Day to day, I managed reception and high-volume calls, meeting-room bookings and appointments, office supplies, and maintenance and contractors across a seven-level building. On the financial side, I ran payroll, invoicing, debtor follow-up, supplier records and reconciliation support in Xero, and prepared BAS data for the external accountants across NCBC and two other businesses owned by the director, including one based in New Zealand - so I understand the accountant's side of the handover and the deadlines that come with it. I was also the staff contact for HR administration - recruiting, onboarding, training and rostering our reception and cleaning team - and was retained specifically to train managerial staff.

I'm highly organised, comfortable working independently and prioritising a varied workload, and confident across Word, Excel and Outlook. I also make a habit of improving the systems I run: I built our template and SOP library, introduced online and recurring payments, and rebuilt the monthly director's report as a largely AI-automated workflow from Xero exports, cutting preparation from four hours to 30 minutes. In an accounting practice, that means cleaner records, fewer manual steps and more time for your team to spend with clients. Discretion comes naturally - I handled confidential financial, legal and medical information for tenants and their clients.

I live in Newcastle and can work from either your Newcastle or East Maitland office. I would welcome the chance to talk about how I could keep your office running smoothly. My CV is attached, and I'm available for an interview at your convenience.

Kind regards,

Sarah Blanch
